So as we discussed, you can do:

NFL Player, "NFL" as his team, the correct year and the correct record.
No name, no team, no uniform number.

I assume we can still do Team and Year, but we need to remove name and number.

We can refer to Dan Marino as "Dolphins QB", but for year it will be left blank.

Does this work?

They said "no" to this despite my attempts to convince them otherwise. They have taken a hard line on no retired players in the game in any form.

LaShun,

Last we spoke about this you wanted to discuss it internally but it sounded like your initial reaction was that this use might be allowable.

Have you had a chance to discuss further?

Jeremy,

Please give me a call to discuss; this is a little gray as it relates to the rights.

Subject: NFL Record Book (in Madden) question

We are designing a feature in Madden where there will be a living record book with all the pre-set NFL records, by game, by season and by career. As you progress in your career you can break these records with players in the game, but from a default starting point we would like to use the real NFL records. Obviously many records are held by players no longer in the league. Our legal group has come back and said that we can legally display this information, including the record holder's name and info since it is factual real-world data. However before proceeding I wanted to run this by you.

What do you think? I know that Players INC doesn't want us to include any retired players "in the game" - but in this case given that it is factual, real word information that is readily available, our hope is that you would agree with us that this particular feature is made much stronger by including the text display of the record data. To confirm, this is text display only as you would see in an actual record book, newspaper or online.

Let me know when you can.

Thanks.

- Jeremy
